

The Star-Spangled Banner

Composer: Francis Scott Key

Background: Francis Scott Key was an American attorney. After being detained aboard a British warship in an attempt to negotiate the release of an American civilian imprisoned by British troops, Key witnessed a 25-hour bombardment of Fort McHenry, located in Baltimore, Maryland. Key began writing the lyrics of the Star-Spangled Banner after being inspired at the sight of a flag flying over the fort on September 14, 1814, having withstood the British bombardment.

Date: The Star-Spangled Banner was adopted as the National Anthem by a congressional resolution (46 Stat. 1508, codified at 36 U.S.C. § 301), which was signed into law by President Herbert Hoover on March 3, 1931.

O say can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars through the perilous fight
O'er the ramparts we watch'd were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there,
O say does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On the shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, half conceals, half discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines in the stream,
'Tis the star-spangled banner - O long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore,
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a Country should leave us no more?
Their blood has wash'd out their foul footsteps' pollution.

No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave,
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

O thus be it ever when freemen shall stand
Between their lov'd home and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserv'd us a nation!

Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto - "In God is our trust,"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.
